Jolies Give Thanks, Go Bowling

The Jolies gathered in copious numbers to celebrate Thanksgiving this year.

The annual feast was hosted by Bob and Cathy in Brampton and was attended by Jolies from far flung places such as Cobourg, Windsor, North Bay, Harriston, Ouagadougou, and Brantford.

After devouring the cornucopia of festive foodstuffs, most of the assemblage went bowling for some casual exercise. It had been several years since most of the family last bowled, and it took a few frames before people found their stride and remembered how to grip a ten-pin ball, but everyone had a good time.

Next up: Boxing Day bowling.

ALISON LOSES MIND, LICENSE

The Ontario Ministry of Transportation revoked Alison's driving license before the Thanksgiving long weekend after receiving a note from her doctor saying her medical condition prevented her from safely operating a motor vehicle.

Alison maintains this is a misunderstanding and that she has contacted the Ministry to resolve the issue. In the meantime she can be seen walking and cycling around town.

Her condition remains unnamed, but sources close to her suggest it may be "the crazies".

Pumpkin Cookies

1 cup shortening
 3/4 cup sugar
 1 cup cooked, strained pumpkin
 1 egg
 2 cups flour
 1 cup raisins
 1/2 cup molasses

1 teaspoon baking soda
 1 teaspoon cinnamon
 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
 1/2 teaspoon salt

Pre-heat oven to 375 F. Cream the shortening and sugar. Mix in pumpkin, egg, and molasses. Stir in dry ingredients, spices, and raisins. Put mixture in spoonful-sized drops on an ungreased baking sheet. Bake for 10 to 12 minutes.

ASK ANGELINA

Dear Angelina, Sometimes I get really frustrated with life and want to take a pen and jam it into my aorta.

–Girl holding a pen to her throat

Dear girl, your aorta is in your chest.

Dear Angelina, My wife says that seatbelts save lives in the event of a car accident, but I think belts prevent you from being safely ejected from the wreckage. Who's right?

–Crazy driver

Dear Crazy, Unfortunately statistics support your wife's position.

Alison's Biggest Fan

When Alison worked at Vitran during the summer, there was a guy nicknamed the Creepy Creepster who would stare and whistle at her. During an end-of-the-summer work party, Alison got to know the Creepster, whose name is actually Surl Kapoor, and they became good friends.
